STEVENS'S DEAD PRESIDENT.

HE WAS A PIONEER IN AMERICAN TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

non a Reputation as a Young Man for scientific Achievements - Classical Scholar, Essayist and Poet -Astonished Typdall With His Discovery, Thallene.

Although the fame of the late President Henry Morton of Stevens Institute will rest chiefly on his thirty-two years of service for that institute, he was a man of creditable vements in varied directions. He first distinguished himself while at college when a plaster cast of the Rosetta Stone was presented to the Philomathean Society of the university.

At Morton's suggestion a committee, sisting of himself, Charles R. Hale and S. R. Jones, was appointed to translate its inscriptions. The Greek, demotic and hieroglyphic inscriptions on the stone had already been studied by Champollion and Dr. Young, but no complete translation of all its texts had been made. Hale, who was afterward Dean of Davenport College, lowa, worked out the Greek and demotic texts and Morton, who had given much time to the study of the dead Egyptian language, the hieroglyphic text. When all was completed he illuminated the manuscript. The Hon. Henry D. Gilpin, a classical scholar, induced the student to undertake its drawing on lithographic stone. Morton had no experience in this work, but he undertook it and completed a book of 172 pages, with upward of 100 designs in illustrations in color. Different publishers refused to handle the work, but notwithstanding this it met with such favor that within two weeks of its issue the edition was exhausted. The work has since been rated by bibliophiles as among the rarest books printed in the nineteenth century. Baron Alexander von Humboldt, in a letter to one of the committee on the subject, said it was "the first essay at independent investigation by the literature of the new continent." scholar, induced the student to undertake Professor Morton did not pursue his Professor Morton did not pursue his linguistic studies seriously after leaving college, but occasionally put them to humorous use. Among the publications of this character is an essay on the "Antiquities of Bloomerism," which abounds in quotations from Sophocles, Herodotus, Diodorus Siculus, Appollonius, Rhodius and Strabo. Another was "The Misogynist's Dinner." He was also throughout his life a clever humorous poet.

ist's Dinner." He was also throughout his life a clever humorous poet.

Just at the time he decided not to practise law after studying it came the reaction in schools and colleges against the especial attention paid to classical studies. The trustees of the Episcopal Academy of Philadelphia fitted up a little room in the academy and engaged Prof. Morton to give instruction in chemistry and physics. Most of the apparatus was made by Prof. Morton himself. The little lecture room soon became self. The little lecture room soon became famous in Philadelphia. The public clamored for admission. Extra lectures had to be held in the afternoons. Engagements and professorships too numerous to mention were offered to the lecturer.

After his appointment as resident secretary of the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia.

After his appointment as resident secre-tary of the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia in 1864 he delivered at the Academy of Music in that city the first of a series of lectures on light, heat, sound and cognate topics. The lectures attracted such wide notice that they were kept up for the six following years.

tures on Light." Tyndall visited the insti-tute in the course of his stay in New York and was presented by President Morton with a design painted with the new sub-stance for use in his lectures. Typidali forgot all about the design until when in the middle of one of his lectures in Philadelphia he came to the illustration of fluo-rescence and asked his assistant to hold it up to a beam of violet light. When it blazed out with its peculiar brilliancy the lecturer was so startled that he exclaimed, Good heavens, I never saw anything like

MIDDLE STATES OARSMEN MEET. Annual Regatta Will Be Held on Labor Day -Officers Elected.

The Middle States Regatta Association held its an oal meeting last night at Pabst Cale on 175th street and the session attracted a crowd of enthusiastic parsmen to the neighberhood. Thirty-five clubs comprise the association and some of these are situated at Philadelphia, Newark, Long Island and loboken. Considering the irregularity of Hoboken. Considering the irregularity of the combination, the meeting last night was thoroughly represented. A review of the season's work, the election of officers and the arrangement of the annual regatta were the chief items transacted. Though the association has no means of revenue, it saw a fairly prosperous year, the Treasurer's report showing only a deficit of $45.78. Wil-liam Vanderveer, President of the organiza-tion, occupied the chair.

Under the head of new business there was a lengthy discussion on the qualification of college oarsmen entering the races of the Middle States Regatta Association. James Pilkington spoke for about half an hour on the subject and explained clearly the light in which college oarsmen should be regarded. It was the sense of the meeting that a Varsity oarsman who had not rowed in a match race should be accepted as a junior oarsman. It was finally decided that the matter be held over until some definite action is taken by the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. The location and date of the association's

What will happen to the men who land there, particularly if they are ignorant of the danger? It is not pleasant to think of. The fer-de-lance does not wait to be attacked. He is a born murderer. When he has once set his venomous mind on a man he will follow until one or the other is slain. Add to this natural leaning the fear and fury of the snakes at being driven forth from their own places and I think one can appreciate that their presence will not be the least of the dangers following the catastrophe."

The history of the fer-de-lance in the island of Martinique is a peculiar one. It is said that originally this island was entirely free from poisonous snakes, as Cuba is now. It was, however, overrun with a particularly active and versions. with a particularly active and voracious species of rats. Some enterprising in-habitant, hearing that the fer-de-lance habitant, hearing that the fer-de-lance was extremely rough on rats, sent to Trinidad and had some imported. The visitors did their work. In a few years it was said in Martinique that the only surviving rats were those that had learned to climb trees and turned into flying sourrels. However that may be, the community soon found itself confronted by the Massachusetts cutworm and English sparrow proposition, but in a far more serious form, the remedial agents proved to be worse than the original pest. So many persons were bitten that work in the fields came to a standstill. Roadmaking ceased. It was said that no bitten person recovered was said that no bitten person recovered except in the case of woodchoppers. Having their axes handy they would, if the bite were on the arm or leg, chop off the member instantly and thus save their lives. It became a sort of caste-mark for the woodsman to have only three out of his four man to have only three out of his four original limbs.

Then the French Government got up statistics and discovered that in proportion to the population the deathrate from snakebite was the highest in the world, worse even than in the centre of India. Abounty was offered. Bands of snake hunters went forth to hunt. Some few of them came Unfortunately the secretary bird is a very striking individual, and he has a crest of considerable beauty, not to mention his picturesque tail feathers. The young ladies of Martinique desired those feathers as millinery. Therefore the youth of the island set forth to get them. As the secretary bird is some four feet long and a fighter by nature, it is not practicable to eatch him and pull out his crest and tail. The Martinique sports went after him with The Martinique sports went after him with guns and soon the places that had known him knew him no more. Most of the birds were soon killed, as they are not shy, regarding themselves as immune by virtue of their profession. Of course, the fer-de-lance came back.

They had been living the life of terrified mice in nooks and crannies for years, but enough of them survived to rehabilitate the snake community as soon as the enemy disappeared. Now they lord it over the entire island outside of the cities, and man and beast alike walk in constant terror

NEW CONGRESS DISTRICTS.

Politicians Have Not Got Used Yet to the Change of Boundaries.

The new apportionment of the Congress districts under the act of 1901 is puzzling Republican and Democratic leaders as to candidates. Many of the old districts have been thrown out of gear, and the personality of many Congressmen under report showing only a defect of $45.78. William Vanderveer, President of the organization, occupied the chair.

After the roll call came the reading of the report of the previous meeting, which, on a motion of F. W. McNight of the Harlem Rowing Club, was unanimously adopted. Secretary David Brown's report was also received without question. There being no unfinished business, the election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows:

President, William Vanderveer, Passaic Boat Club, Newark, N. J.; Vice-President, Dr. J. F. Buckley, Wyanoke Boat Club, New York, Recording Secretary, G. S. referee Charley White stood motionless ing to get to his feet.

International A. C. were amazed. For the first three seconds not a single person moved or spoke. Then suddenly a mighty cheer broke forth. Men jumped to their feet and surged toward the ring. Gans stood not five feet from the prostrate form of Erne, with his hands at his side. He simply watched Erne turn over on his stomach and stretch himself at full length, a beaten man. Gans never moved an inch until the fatal ten sec onds were counted. Charlie White stood side by side with Gans, his right arm rising at the count of six. Erac with a game effort worked his hands under him, but at the end of ten seconds he was still on his stomach, of ten seconds he was still on his stomach, frantically trying to get up. An instant later Erne drew his feet under him and attempted to stand. His seconds were at his side, and with the aid of Referce White, they bore him to his corner. He was still unconscious, but a dash of cold water brought him back to life.

"Did he knock me out?" he asked of his seconds. Then he began to weep bitterly. In the meantime Gans's friends and backers broke into the ring and carried him to his dressing room.

$1,000 to $750 were offered, with few takers. Promptly at $6 of clock Erne and Gans weighed in. Both boxers were below the stipulated weight, 135 pounds at the ringside. Frne weighed exactly 135 pounds, Gans's weight was announced as being 134% pounds. In Gans's corner were All Perford, Young Peter Jackson and Jimmy Murray. Erne was seconded by Frank Zimpfer, Slip Kreiger and Jimmy Connors.

Joe McMahon and Eddie Kelly were the participants in the preliminary contest. They were announced to go eight rounds. After four and two-thirds of a round, the police officials entered the ring and ordered Referee McBride to stop the contest. It was a draw.

failed to score on theirs, but Cornell scored for the Mohawks. The score at the end of the first half stood 3: to 15 in favor of the Mohawks, and the Flushing team, when they came out, went to work as if they meant to fag out their opponents.

For a time the ball was kept near the Grace A. C. basket and the Flushingites scored twice before the Mohawks railled. Then the game roughened up and became faster and more scrappy than ever. The Mohawks did not propose to lose their lead and they began to rough it. Twice they had fouls called against them and both times the Grace team scored a point of them. Hutchings and Fox were the particular stars of the game and the loud persistency with which their names were shouted by their follow: swould lead one to think that they were whole team. Hutchings was seidom out of may play and both made several sensational goals. Harvey for the Grace team scored a goal from nearly the full length of the court in the first hulf and Linning did the same in the second half. The line-up and score follow:

Point of the Jaw the Decisive Blow.

FORT ERIE, May 12 -- Joe Gans is now the undisputed lightweight champion of the world. He won that title here to-night by completely knocking out Frank Erne in minute and forty seconds of fighting with a right-hand upper-cut to the jaw point The knockout punch was so clever, so un expected and so quick that even Gans and an instant, staring at the white form of Erne as he lay on his stomach, valuly attempt

At the fifth count Erne partly raised himself on one arm only to roll over on his face

In the meantime Gans's friends and backers broke into the ring and carried him to his dressing room.

During the minute and forty seconds of boxing not more than eight blows were struck. The men met in the centre of the ring. Both were cautious. Gans feinted with his left for the head and Erne shot his right to the face. Some more sparring followed. Again Gans feinted with his left. This time he let drive. The blow caught Erne square on the nose. As Gans's glove drew back a tiny stream of blood began to flow from Ernes nose. They sparred again. Gans feinted a left for the head once more. Erne stepped toward him and as he did Gans's right went to the jaw. This was the blow that won and lost the championship. Erne fell toward Gans and then to the floor.

After the bout Gans offered Erne a return match—the accepted. Gans said: It was a lucky punch. Erne declared emphatically that it was nothing else. Erne wept like a child in his dressing room.

The New York delegates were the first out-of-town people to arrive. All of the New Yorkers were backing Gans to win Just before the preliminary contest went on Erne money went hungry. Odds of $1,000 to $750 were offered, with few takers. Promptly at 9 o'clock Erne and Gans weighed in. Both boxers were below the

The first period was a snappy one and scoring began in the first three minutes by a fine goal from Raymond Herbert's mallet Seward Cary, the veteran of the team, soon made another and J. C. Cooley, Jr., a Harvard student, scored the third. J. P. Grace made the first goal for Great Neck and Morgan Grace scored just before the call of time. Great Neck counted twice to four goals for Lakewood, and when, in the next period, they held lakewood down to two goals there was evidence of a close game.

Lakewood upset these calculations by Lakewood upset these calculations by capturing everything in the third period, knocking four goals in fast succession and they made four more in the last period, Harry M. Earle making one in thirty seconds. The last goal was made by Herbert in fifty seconds. For one of the younger players the latter showed up wonderfully well. A spectacular goal was made by Cooley in the third period when he hit the ball in the quarter field, sending it high in the air so that it went sailing far over the posts. The winners were in far better practice than the Great Neck riders and had better courted of their ponies. Lakewood lost three-fourths of its score from one safety and one foul.
